3. Mode of selection

Procedure for Admission

- a) Only those candidates who have appeared in NET / GATE (for engineering programs) examination will be considered for admission to Ph.D. programme. The score obtained by the scholars in NET / GATE (for engineering programs) will be considered for determining the merit of the candidate for admission. In case of courses (except engineering courses), if the candidates with both NET & GATE examinations are available, in that case the preference will be given to the candidates who have qualified the NET examination.
- b) The distribution of weightages to different components for determining the merit shall be as under:

Score for JRF/NET/GATE* applicants	Research proposal presentation & Interview
70%	30%

- *JRF/NET/GATE qualified candidates will be given 70 marks.
- \*Candidates who have not qualified NET will be given marks on pro-rata basis out of 70 marks. (For example, if a candidate who have not qualified NET but score 80 marks in NET exam will be given score as  $(\frac{80}{200} \times 70 = 28)$  i.e.  $(\frac{\text{Marks obtained in NET}}{\text{Maximum Marks in NET}} \times 70)$ .
- The final selection shall be made on the basis of composite marks (as mentioned above) awarded by the Committee. The list will be prepared merit wise, category wise depending upon the availability of the seats notified in each Department / Centre.
- The decision of the committee determining merit based on formula suggested shall be binding on candidate.

Note: There will be no entrance test.

4. Reservation of Seats in Admission
